

Police Chief Scorns Aid of Men In Enforcing One of His Orders

Single-Handed, in an Hour's Fight, He Proves to a Dozen Gamblers That He's Running the Town.

A police officer walked into the office of Chief of Police Len Marcy of North Bergen, N. J., a week ago and told him that he believed half a dozen new arrivals in the town were about to open a gambling place on Hudson Boulevard, near Anderson Avenue.

"I'll go up and see them," said the chief. He did and now the citizens of North Bergen wouldn't trade their police chief for any three of the most famous officials now attending the police convention.

Marcy hastened to the house where the gamblers were making ready for business. He told them to leave town. Then, in three hours he returned and when he found them still there he promised them if they were not out in thirty minutes they would see some of the speediest action they had ever encountered. In fifteen minutes Chief Marcy had the house surrounded by a score of police. Then, entering alone, he sauntered up to the leader.

"I gave you a good chance to get out of North Bergen without experiencing any trouble," began the chief. "Well, what about it?" Insolently challenged the gambler.

At that the room filled with more than a dozen men. A whistle from the chief would have brought a dozen armed policemen into the room and it would have been all over in a minute, but Marcy wanted to handle the matter himself.

Weighing a little more than 200 pounds, Len clenched his fists and prepared for action. It came quickly, one of the gamblers buried a chair back from a remote corner of the room. Instantly there was a free for all fight. The Jersey Chief ploughed and without a word to the waiting policemen outside the cattle raged at the better part of an hour. Finally Chief Marcy emerged from the room to the porch and ordered one of his men to call an ambulance.

Inside, a half dozen men lay sprawled about the floor, cut and bleeding. An ambulance and a police car were sent for and the incident was closed except for the police court proceedings to follow. Chief Marcy's motto is to say little, do much.

"It wasn't anything," said the chief after it was over. "They couldn't get out, so I decided to show them I couldn't be fooled with." He showed 'em, and 25,000 people of a town applauded.

ADS, 16 AND 20, HELD IN DRUG ARRESTS

Younger Prisoner Used Bicycle in Trade, Police Say.

With the arrest of Joseph Amel, sixteen, who lives at No. 257 1st Street, Brooklyn, the police believe they have reduced the mysterious traffic into the eastern district of Williamsburg of large quantities of narcotics. The youth used a bicycle to his trade, it is said.

Amel was seized to-day after he delivered and received payment for a bottle of heroin, the police say. In John Webb, twenty-one, of No. 207 11th Street, Richmond Hill, he also was arrested. Detectives of the Narcotic Squad who made the arrests said they had been shadowing Amel for several weeks but had been unable to arrest him with drugs in his possession.

Magistrate Folwell in Bridge Plaza court held Amel under $1,000 bail on charges of possessing and selling narcotics and Webb under $500 on the former count, for examination Sept. 23.

EARLY DECISION IN HOSPITAL PROBE

Findings of Committee Will Be Made Public in Washington.

That the findings of the special committee which has been investigating conditions in U. S. Veterans' Hospital No. 81, Kingsbridge Road and Sedgwick Avenue, the Bronx, will be made public in Washington, only after they have been reviewed by Col. Charles R. Forbes, director of the Veterans' bureau under which the hospital is run, was made known to-day by C. H. Jewett, a member of the committee.

Col. Forbes will receive the report of the committee and himself make it public, Mr. Jewett said, because the investigating committee was acting at Col. Forbes's request.

At the close of the hearing yesterday Mr. Jewett announced that the committee would hold an executive meeting to-day. Mr. Jewett to-day did not know whether the session would be held or not, because Mr. Lipton, he said, had several engagements which might interfere. If the committee could get together, Mr. Jewett said he believed it would be possible to determine the findings at one session.
